GENERAL MINING NEWS.

The Directors of the Park Canyon Company Met and Transact

Some Business.

The Officers of the Fourth of July Mining Company Elected Yesterday.

Late Reports From the Mine-Stock Ordered Issued-Chat With a Local Mining Stock Broker.

The trustees of the Park canyon company held a meeting a few days ago with D. J. Welch, John Mothitt and E. D. Edgerton present. President Welch presided. Mr. Edgerton's resignation as treasurer was accepted and the offices of treasurer and secretary were combined. Mr. Moffitt, the secretary, was therefore duly elected secretary-treasurer. The retiring treasurer's report showed $1,000 on hand, which was transferred to Mr. Moffitt. In consequence of the death of Gariand O. Humpirey, one of the late trustees, by resolution of the board, J. B. Sanford, of Helena, was duly elected to fill the vacancy. The board then

The Fourth of July.

The directors and incorporators, Messrs. J. K. Pardee, Samuel T. Hauser, Ed I. Zimmerman, Wilbur F. Sanders, Jos. K. Clark and Theo Kleinschmidt, met yesterday to perfect the organization of the Fourth of July company and dispose of other matters of importance. Mr. Louis Teuscher of St. Louis, was the only director absent.

The board first proceeded to the election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Jos. K. Clark; vice president, Samuel T. Hauser; treasurer, T. H. Kleinschmidt; secretary, C. B. Garrett; general manager, Jas. K. Pardee

Jas. K. Pardee.

The company authorized the purchase of the mine and the issuance of stock. The purchase is made of Messrs. Warren Hussey and Taylor of Spokane Falls. The Fourth of July incorporation inclodes seven-eighths of the mine. Jonathan Bourne, of New Bedford, Mass., owns the remaining one-eighth interest, but he held his interest at such an exorbitant figure that his interest at such an exorbitant figure that he was left out.

The trustees authorized the secretary and The trustees authorized the secretary and treasurer to sell 10,000 shares of the treasury stock at not less than fifty cents per share. John Welch, the present foreman, will take charge at the mine. Thus another new mining company starts out upon its career, which is of a most encouraging character. An Independent reporter was shown a letter yesterday from Patrick Clark, superintendent of the Poorman mine, in which he gives the latest report from the Fourth of July as follows:

"The south drift which has been poor has

July as follows:

"The south drift which has been poor has now four feet of forty ounce ore; the north drift is over four feet and samples 256 ounces. This refers to the eighty-five foot levels. She is a great property and ought to sell for $1.00 per share to-day. There is now on the dump fifteen tons of the same grade as that you had worked at Helena (and which went 497 ounces to the ton) and 100 tons of the 150 ounce ore."

It was only after repeated examinations and actual attainments that the present company took hold of this property and from all reports they have a mine of merit. The experience of the Poorman and the Iron Mountain was such that no less than ffteen men are indignant because they didn't get in on the first subscription list to the stock. Henry Bratnober is authority for the statement that the Fourth of July has a better showing than any property in Montana, for the work accomplished and Jos. K. Clark says it is not every day you run across a the work accomplished and Jos. K. Clark says it is not every day you run across a mine where you can sort out a carload of ore that will run 499 ounces to the ton. The mine is in a well timbered and well watered country. Development will be prosecuted with vigor during the winter, but no more ore will be shipped until spring. It is proposed to erect a mill on the property before snow fall of 1890. The ore is a sulphide and just base enough to require a chlorination to be milled.

This enterprise is only another illustra-

The Minah Property.

This great mine, two-thirds of which has been sold to an English syndicate for the handsome sum of $400,000, is one of the best developed properties in the state. Three tunnels have been run in on the vein a distance of 1.800, 1,300 and 1,200 feet respectively, one below the other. The greatest depth reached is 500 feet. The present work is being done in tunnels Nos. 2 and 3 and the amount of oreshipped daily is from thirty to sixty tons. The money to pay for the mine was expressed from London about one week ago, and barring accidents, will arrive here in about seven days. Besides the money the owners are to receive one third of the stock. After turning the property over to the new company Mr. Sites will devote his attention to the development of the property owned by him in the Neihart district and Mr. J. O. Briscoe will begin extensive developments and improvements on the various mining properties owned by him in Montana.

A big strike has been made in the above property, which is situated about five and a half miles northwest of Helena. The mine is developed by an incline shaft 100 feet in depth. So far but three tons of ore have been shipped, which brought $80 at the Helena smelter. Last week John Phillips, principal owner of the mine, received a telephone message from the foreman to "come out." He did so at once and found, on arrival at the mine, that a vein of ore from two and a half to three feet in width had been encountered at the seventy-five-foot station, where a cross-cut and levels are being run. The ore is high grade chloride of silver, the best of it running 1,600 oz. to the ton; average $90. Througe a typographical error the report of the M. A. Vigilantes.

Twenty-two years ago, in the halcyon days of placer mining in Montana, a placer mine was discovered in a dry ravine which was named Pierce's gulch, after the name of the man who discovered it. This gulch is situated about four miles south of Helena and is a tributary of Grizzly gulch, George Pierce, the discoverer, was an old Californian, who understood placer mining very well, and soon after setting his sluices Nelson Story, a prominent banker and stockgrower of Bozeman, is visiting the proved to be very rich. Pierce was a cental kindly sort of a man, who loved his friends. his family, his liquor, and who seemed to be possessed of but one ambition. The supreme wish of his heart was to start a saloon, where he could enjoy the company of the boys all the time, and take a drink whenever he wanted it, and play cards and be "a d-d good fellow," as "Pike" Ramsev expressed it; and Pike was no slouch himself when it came to leading the kind of life that Pierce proposed to himself, although Pike was never fortunate enough to

> Well, as soon as Pierce had taken out nough money for the purpose, he built a hewed log cabin, one story and a half high, and stocked it with a good supply of such liquors as were to be obtained, "log cabin bitters," "Hostetter's," and forty-rod whisky, or tarantula juice.

The place proved prosperous from the start, as the miners were all well fixed and nothing loth to blow in their dust. Drinking and card-playing was carried on day and night without ceasing and the proprie-tor seemed to be enjoying a high old time. This condition of affairs continued for several months and nothing occurred to mar the harmony of the camp till a man named Daniels put in an appearance. He was also a Cal.fornian and took as kindly to the ways a Callfornian and took as kindly to the ways of the camp as if he had been used to it all his life. At cards he was rather successful, but socially he was not a pronounced favorite, especially when under the influence of liquor. One night Daniels and a miner named Gartley were playing poker and a dispute arose over some point in the game, and what at first seemed to be only a friendly altercation which would end in words, became more and more serious as the dispute waxed warmer. Gartley was a fine looking man, over six feet high, and as strong and active as a panther, while Daniels was of rather small stature and physically much inferior as a panther, while Daniels was of rather small stature and physically much inferior to his opponent. Exasperated beyond endurence, Gartley picked up a stool and knocked his antagonist down, and jumped on him with the purpose of giving him a good whipping. He nad not struck Daniels more than three or four times when the latter succeeded in getting hold of his knife and stabbed Gartley in the bowels several times. When he discovered that he was cut Gartley arose from the floor and ran to a house near by, crying to the inmates; "I am killed!" It was only too true. After lingering sevand was followed to his grave by many sorrowing friends.

Daniels was immediately arrested, tried and sentenced to the penitentiary for a number of years, but it was only a short time before friends interceded in his behalf and he was granted a pardon by the governor. After being released from prison he went to Virginia City, Mont. He wished to return to Helena, but knowing that a feeling of hositility existed against him here, his friends tried to dissuade him from his purpose. But he insisted on returning and did so. The morning following his arrival the lifeless body of Daniels was found hanging on the old pine tree in Dry gulch—the vigilantes had got him.

It was in the winter time and the weather

It was in the winter time and the weather was very cold, consequently the body was frozen solid. It was cut down during the day and several speeches were made denouncing the regulators, as it was thought by the more conservative element, that the action of the constituted authorities ought to be sustained. Well after this the body was taken out to the old burying ground, where the public school building now stands, where the public school building now stands, and decently and quietly interred.

This, so far as the public knew, was the last of Daniels.

But a story, stranger than the strangest fiction of Rider Haggard, has lately leaked out, which is to the effect that Daniels is alive and well, and living in Rogue river valley. Oreson out, which is to the effect that Daniels is alive and well, and living in Rogue river valley, Oregon.

On the night succeeding the interment of Daniels four individuals, one of whom was an old Flathead Indian chief, went steathly to the cemetery and dug up the body. They wrapped it up in blankets and slipped it carefully into a wagon which was near at hand, and all four getting in, they drove rapidly away across the mountains towards the Bitter Root valley. Over the range, down the Biackfoot and Deer Lodge valleys they kept on their way till the Jocko agency was reached. Here the wagon drew up in front o, an Indian tepee, or lodge. It was nearly dark, and the scene was weird beyond description. A short distance away the outlines of many tepees could be seen, showing that a large band of Indians was encamped there. The body of Daniels was taken into the lodge and left in charge of the old Indian, the white men driving a short distance away where they camped for the night.

The next morning the three men repaired to the lodge of the old Indian and there, lying on a couch of furs was the emaciated form of Daniels. He was alive, but a ghastly look was on his face, which was rendered more ghastly by a dark blue mark around his neck made by the noose by which he had been strangled. By what mysterious power and magical art this seeming miracle had been performed will never be known, for the old chief had dissapeared from the haunts of his tribe as completely and suddenly as if he had never been. No amount of search could ever discover his hiding place, although Daniels and his fri ands left no stone unturned to find him. The Indians said he unturned to find him. The Indians said he was a "big medicine man," and he had gone away, that is all the information that could

The relator of the story refused to disclose his identity. further than that he was a hunter and prospector, and spent most of his time in the mountains, far away from the haunts of men.
